The model-turned-designer lets us in on her fashionable world.

If there's one Aussie celeb who embodies the idea of the girl-next-door made good, it's Jennifer Hawkins. The former Miss Universe has come a long way since her cheerleading days and in recent years has morphed from model into budding business mogul. Right now, the 28-year-old is focusing on Cozi by Jennifer Hawkins (her swimwear label) and the expansion of her chic JLH by Jennifer Hawkins shoe collection. However, the Myer ambassador is not the sort of celeb fashion designer who leaves the 'designing' part to someone else. "I would never start a brand if I didn't have the time to be 100 per cent committed to it," she says. "I find the design process so rewarding. I draw inspiration from everywhere. And I love spotting girls in JLH - it's a crazy adrenalin rush! I feel so blessed to be doing what I'm doing." We chatted to Jen about shoes, her penchant for collecting skulls and her crush on Channing Tatum... ➔
